ABSTRACT

The Ju’ e Yundong (The Anti-Russian Movement of 1903) was one of the less known event in the history of modern China. Important as it is, it was not given the recognition and acknowledgement it deserves. This thesis attempts to redress the injustice it suffers by doing a concise and detailed report and analysis on the life of Cai Yuanpei, a leader of the Movement, and E’ Shi Jingwen, a newspaper which was published during that period of time for promoting the Anti-Russian Movement.
